

PARLEY TOMORROW MAY BRING PEACE IN NEAR EAST

OBSERVANCE OF FIRE PREVENTION WEEK IS URGED IN THIS CITY

Chamber of Commerce in Accord with Officials in Recommendations.

Following the usual custom, an active campaign for Fire Prevention Week will be held in Dixon. A committee from the Chamber of Commerce cooperating with Commissioner John Armstrong and Fire Chief Tom Coffey ask the cooperation of all the citizens of Dixon. Ordinary precautions, according to statistics furnished the Dixon Chamber of Commerce from the national chamber, would do away with much of the country's half billion dollar annual fire loss.

The following committee has been appointed to aid the officials for this week: John Armstrong, Tom Coffey, I. B. Potter, Geo. Shaw, Joe Valle, T. J. Miller, Jr., Ernest Senneff, and William Cahill.

For the guidance of the public the organization issues today—the first day of Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 2, and to October 8th—a few simple rules designed to reduce fire hazards. These rules are as follows:

Suggested Rules
"Before starting the fires for winter, it is important that careful attention be given to the chimneys and flues, for if they are neglected the entire home may be reduced to a few charred embers merely because of such lack of care. During the five years ending 1920, property valued in excess of $12,000,000 was destroyed annually as the result of defective chimneys and flues. The larger part of this loss could have been prevented if an inspection had been made, soot cleaned out, and the necessary repairs made before the fire was built in the fall.

"Oils and gasoline take their annual toll of destruction because some one uses them carelessly or ignorantly. Kerosene or gasoline is a dangerous assistant when starting a fire in the stove or furnace. Oily rags or rags often cause fires from spontaneous combustion. They should therefore be kept in metal containers.

"Electric lighting and heating apparatus should be carefully inspected and frequently inspected. Electricity alone caused an average of $17,000,000 loss annually during the five year period ending 1920.

Should Remove Rubbish
"Disorder and untidiness breed fires. Careful attention should therefore be given by the householder to the removal of all rubbish from cellars, attics and cupboards.

"All open lights in a home should be properly protected. Care should be taken that curtains or other inflammable material can not blow in the flame of the gas light. Screens should be placed in front of open fireplaces so that no one can accidentally get his clothes in contact with the flame.

"Lighted matches, cigar or cigarette butts should be properly disposed of.

"Hot water, not fires, should be used to thaw frozen water pipes.

"Every individual owes it to himself, his family and his neighbors to use every means possible to remove the causes of fire in the home. He should realize that carelessness or thoughtlessness on his part may not only deprive him of his property but cause loss and suffering to others through a fire rapidly spreads. The householder should therefore be constantly alert and ever on the lookout for apparently small things which may result in a disaster involving the loss of home and possibly of lives."

WHO SAID CORN?

A stalk of corn 13 feet 4 inches in height and bearing an enormous ear was brought to The Telegraph office this morning by F. W. Fisher who cut it at the "Old Ducker" farm eight miles east of the city yesterday. The farm is being worked by Mr. Fisher's son William, and the field from which the enormous stalk was cut was planted in June. He reports that all the corn in the field is of exceptional height.

OREGON BOY IS IN HOSPITAL AS RESULT MISHAP

Lyle Taylor, 16, Was Shot in Hand Sun- day Afternoon.

Lyle Taylor, aged 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Taylor of Oregon, was the victim of a hunting accident yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock on Rock river near Oregon. The young man with some other friends is said to have started out on the river in a boat, and one of the members of the party had placed a 12 gauge double barreled shot gun in the bottom of the boat before leaving the shore, both barrels being loaded.

A short time after they had left the shore and were getting out into the channel, Lyle is said to have reached down and picked up the gun, catching hold of the end of the barrels. In lifting it up, one of the triggers caught on the side of the boat, and the shells were exploded, the entire load striking him in the right forearm, terribly maiming the member. His companions hurried him back to Oregon and notified his father, who in turn, rushed him to the Dixon hospital.

Funeral of Mrs. Hatch at Home Tomorrow

Mrs. Andrew Hatch, a resident of Dixon and vicinity for a period of 52 years, died at the family home on East Chamberlain street Saturday afternoon at 1:30, her death ending a suffering of about seven years, during which time she has been an invalid. Mrs. Hatch was born in Buffalo, N. Y., August 15, 1841, and was united in marriage to the late Andrew Hatch in this city in 1864.

Her husband preceded her in death and surviving are three children Miss Ida Hatch at home, Frank of Los Angeles, Cal., and Clifford Hatch, superintendent of the Pythian home at Decatur. Three sisters: Miss Susie Howell of Dixon, Mrs. Lizzie Purson of Sterling, Mrs. Carrie Spencer of Chicago; and three brothers: John and James of this city, and William of Marillo, N. Y., also survive. Funeral services will be conducted from the residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, Rev. Lloyd W. Walter officiating and with interment in the Palmyra cemetery.

Foreigner's Auto Over Steep Incline

A party of foreigners, said to be Mexicans, five in number, had a narrow escape from being killed instantly yesterday forenoon about 10 o'clock east of Dixon on the River road. The car of Dixon on the River road. The car apparently swerved and went over a steep embankment. Fortunately the machine, a Ford touring car with a winter top, landed right side up and none of the occupants were seriously injured.

All were apparently considerably excited and after removing the license plates, hurried away from the scene, going through the timber on the Rosbrook farm.

VAUGHN AND GARDNER STAR IN GAME WITH ROCKFORD ON SUNDAY

Dixon Legion Victorious in Game Played in Base- ball Weather.

With Vaughan of Dixon and Countryman of Rochelle, the latter one of the latest acquisitions to the Legion football team, playing stellar roles, supported by an all-star cast, the Dixon Legion battled to victory yesterday afternoon over the hard fighting Rockford Gophers at the Brown Field the final count being 12 to 6, the honors going to Dixon. Miller was the hero in the second quarter of play, when he secured the first touchdown for Dixon. At the outset, the visitors seemed to have an edge on the Legion. The holes did not serve to enliven the game, but had a tendency to make both teams fight all the harder. They were evenly matched and the game was one of the best that has been seen here in two years.

In the first period Rockford held the locals and as the ten minutes was about up, Heinze was given the ball and room being made for him in the Rockford line, he advanced the pigskin 20 yards. He then retired in favor of Yde, who was in a Legion uniform yesterday and whom the fans hope to see in action for the remainder of the season. Yde was given an ovation as he was called out on the field and during the afternoon gave a good account of himself. A forward pass from Hess to Vaughan advanced the ball another ten yards as the whistle blew, neither side having scored.

Legion Scored First
In the second period Rockford was held for downs and punted. The Legion started an assault with a view of scoring and through Miller's aggressiveness, were successful. Vaughan gained ten yards in an end run and on the next play, Miller recovered a fumbled pass and carrying several Rockford players on his back, managed to crawl over the line for the first touchdown. The remainder of the period was without a feature and the half closed with the Legion having scored 6 points and the visitors thus far being blanked.

The heat was rapidly telling on players on both sides and at the outset of the third quarter, several new faces were in line on both sides. Rockford was held for downs and punted. Duane ran down on the punt and recovered the pigskin when it was fumbled and carried it back to the goal posts for a touchdown, tying the score. This gave the visitors new vigor and they battered the Dixon line repeatedly. Alberts tore through an opening and made a twenty-five yard gain. The locals were reinforced from the bench and held the visitors for the rest of the period.

Gardner and Vaughan
In the final quarter, Dixon was held for downs and punted. In some manner, "Yens" Gardner broke through and recovered the pigskin which was fumbled. Vaughan then broke into the line and was the sensation of the afternoon. He took the ball around left end for a 20 yard gain at one time carrying five of the visitors who were trying to stop him on his back. On the next play he went around right end for ten more yards and then when an opening was made in the Gopher line, tore through for ten more and placed the ball back of the goal line for the second touchdown, which spelled victory for the Legion. He failed to kick goal and the score at the end of the game was Dixon, 12; Gophers, 6.

The game throughout was much harder fought than the week prior with the Beloit Iroquois. Countryman of Rochelle filled Risley's position at end in a creditable manner. Risley was in New York state over Sunday playing with Hammond, Ind., in a game against Buffalo. He will be back in the game again next Sunday against Rock Island. Moore and Gardner played their consistent game lasting throughout the entire game while in other positions substitutes were used.

The line-up:
Dixon Legion: Countryman, Miller, ends; Kennedy, Moore, tackle; Austin-Gardner, guards; Dixon-Hutchinson, center; Whippleberg, q.b.; Hess, r.h.b.; Vaughan, Hartman, l.h.b.; Heinze, Weiner, Yde, f.b.

Rockford Gophers: Stitz-Fleishman, ends; T. Fedell-Chew, tackle; Lucas-J. Fedell, guards; Crosby, center; Foster, q.b.; Long, r.h.b.; Carlson, l.h.b.; Alberts, f.b.
Referee, O'Hara. Umpire, Jeters. Head linesman, Gorham.

NACHUSA CHAPTER.
A stated meeting of Nachusa Chapter No. 55, R. A. M. will be held this evening.

THAT HORRIBLE OLD PIECE AGAIN

DIXONITES HURT IN ACCIDENT AT 'DEATH CORNERS'

Milton Noakes' Auto Damaged; Owners Hand is Cut.

Milton Noakes and a party of friends, consisting of his wife, two sisters and brother, who were coming to Dixon on the Lincoln Highway west of town, were victims of an accident last evening about 8:30 at Hess' corner, where a number of serious accidents have occurred this summer. Mr. Noakes was approaching the corner at a low rate of speed when another car passed him.

The rear of the passing car struck his front wheel and threw the Noakes car against a telephone pole, completely wrecking the front end of the car. The driver of the other machine did not stop to ascertain the extent of damage done, but sped on toward Dixon on before the numbers on the license plate could be secured. Mr. Noakes was probably the most injured of the party, sustaining a deep cut on back which required several stitches to close. Others in the party were considerably shaken up, but not seriously injured. The car was towed to the Barron & Huyett garage to be repaired and the parties were given medical attention here and then taken to their homes.

Rep. Senatorial Committee to Aid in Iowa Campaign

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 2.—In the face of anti-Brookhart meeting called by dissatisfied Republicans to be held here tomorrow, E. B. Burquhart, chairman of the state central committee of the party, announced yesterday that the resources of the national senatorial committee of the Republican party will be thrown into the right to elect Colonel Smith W. Brookhart to the United States Senate.

To this end, Chairman Burquhart announced Senator Medill McCormick of Illinois, Senator Thomas Sterling of South Dakota, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas and Senator A. B. Kellough of Minnesota will come into the state within the next six weeks to campaign in Brookhart's favor.

Follows Husband to Grave in Two Weeks

(Special to Evening Telegraph.)
Amboy, Ill., Oct. 2.—Mrs. Joseph Graves, mother of William F. Graves, Amboy hardware dealer, passed away at her home in Chicago this morning. The body will be brought to Amboy tomorrow and funeral services will be conducted Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will take place in Prairie Repose cemetery. Mrs. Graves' husband passed away in Chicago about two weeks ago.

AMBOY GIRL FATALLY BURNED SATURDAY AS SHE PLAYED AT HOME

Dress Caught Fire in Yard in Front of Mother's Home.

(Special to Evening Telegraph.)
Amboy, Ill., Oct. 2.—Helen Irene Thrasher, aged two years and seven months, was fatally burned at her home here Saturday morning about 9:30. While her mother was taking care of a baby in the house Helen went out into the yard with some other children, who were playing with clothes and a small candle. Her clothing caught fire and the little one ran screaming to the house.

Her mother was the first to reach her and wrapped a rug about the little body, extinguishing the flames, but the child was terribly burned and was hurried at once to the Amboy hospital, where death ended her suffering Saturday evening about 5:30. Coroner S. J. Whetston conducted an inquest over the remains at the Vaughan mortuary yesterday. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts. Funeral services were conducted from the home of her aunt, Mrs. Joseph Whetston, in Brookhart this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Bayley officiating and with interment in Prairie Repose cemetery.

DO YOU KNOW?

(By Dixon Chamber of Commerce.)
Rogers Printing Company was established in Dixon in 1903 under the name of Rogers & Owen. In 1910 Mr. Owen retired from business and the name was changed to Rogers Printing Company. In 1912 they established a Chicago sales office, through which is handled their Chicago business. This establishment has been growing steadily and developing its specialty of school and college printing until it is now one of the largest printers of school and college annuals in the country.

Some of the largest annuals which have been printed by them, are the "Cornelian" of Cornell University; "Ithaca," N. Y.; "Ilio," of the University of Illinois; "Michiganian," of the University of Michigan; "Badger," of the University of Wisconsin; "Syllabus" of Northwestern University; "Arcturus," University of Indiana; "Cap & Gown," University of Chicago; "Coloradoan," University of Colorado; "Cornhusker," University of Nebraska; "Annual," of Smith College, Northampton, Mass.; "Roll Call," Culver Military Academy, and the "Mirage," of DePauw University.

RESPECTED LADY LONG CITIZEN OF DIXON IS CALLED

Passed Away Saturday Night at Home on First Street.

Mrs. Elizabeth Countryman passed away at the family residence, 604 West First street Saturday night at 11:30, her death resulting from an illness of eighteen months duration. In her passing Dixon loses one of its leading women, a resident of the city for more than a half century.

Mrs. Countryman was born at Sharon Springs, N. Y., May 27, 1834, and was the last member of her immediate family. She came to Dixon in 1867 and has continued to reside here since. She was a charter member of the Dixon Woman's club and of the Women's Relief Corps. Her parents, three sisters and two brothers preceded her in death and her husband, I. B. Countryman is the sole immediate survivor. Two nieces and a nephew residing in New York state also survive.

Funeral services will be conducted Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence. Rev. Aubrey S. Moore will officiate and burial will take place in Oakwood.

COMMANDER OF OREGON OF '98 DEAD IN WEST

Rear Admiral Clark to Be Buried with Sim- ple Rites.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Long Beach, Cal., Oct. 2.—Simple funeral services will be held here tomorrow afternoon for Rear Admiral Charles Edgar Clark, retired, commander of the battleship Oregon during the Spanish-American War, who died yesterday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Hughes, wife of Rear Admiral Hughes, commander of the seventh battle division of the Pacific fleet.

Admiral Clark was 79 years old until about ten days ago, when an attack of heart trouble sent him to his bed.

The funeral will be held at the Hughes residence and will be attended only by close friends, who include many of the highest officers in the Pacific fleet. Among them is the Commander-in-Chief Admiral E. W. Eberle, who was a lieutenant on the famous old "Bull Dog" of the navy when the whole world watched her voyage around the Horn, then under Captain Clark.

Leaving San Francisco March 19, 1898, the momentous trip was completed June 3, when Captain Clark reported to Admiral Sampson at Santiago de Cuba. For conduct in the battle of Santiago Captain Clark was advanced a total of thirteen numbers in rank, being made a Rear Admiral in 1902, three years before his retirement.

Naperville's Team Too Generous, Lost

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Aurora, Ill., Oct. 2.—Playing in a baseball tournament here yesterday the Naperville club pined up a 9 to 2 lead on the Plano team in seven innings of a semi-final game and to hasten the end of the game gave the Plano team six straight outs, and waived its own final time at bat. The result was that Plano made seven runs in the six out inning and tied the score. Then Naperville wished to take a turn at bat without permitting Plano a final half inning. Umpire Jack Girsch ruled against this on the ground that Plano had last outs from the start of the game. After this ruling Naperville went to bat and made two runs and shut Plano out in its half.

In the final game of the tournament Naperville lost to the Garfields of Aurora 2-0.

Warning Sign at Hess' Corners is Changed By State

The state department of highways office today placed a new warning sign just west of Hess' corners on the Lincoln highway, which has been the scene of several fatal and a number of less serious accidents this summer. The new sign instead of warning motorists of the cross roads, will read, "Curve Left, Narrow Bridge. This precaution is being taken by the highway department and the Rock River Motor club will also place a warning at the corner.

BRITISH GENERAL TO MEET HEAD OF TURKS AT PEACE CONFERENCE

Agreement on Neutrality of Straits to Be Big Issue.

BULLETIN
London, Oct. 2.—(By the Associated Press)—The Turkish nationalists assembly at Angora has unanimously approved the action of Mustapha Kemal Pasha and has authorized the despatch of delegates to Mudania and later to the peace conference according to a Central News dispatch from Constantinople.

BULLETIN
Athens, Oct. 2.—(By the Associated Press)—The newspapers today announce that the British minister, signed the visitors' book at the palace yesterday and they interpret this as British recognition to the new king.

BULLETIN
Constantinople, Oct. 2.—(11:37 a. m., by the Associated Press)—The allied policy at the Mudania conference, it was learned, this forenoon, will be decided upon at a meeting in Constantinople this afternoon of the allied generals, admirals, high commissioners and military attaches in extraordinary council.

A band of 800 Turkish irregulars crossed the border of Thrace at Sinik, 40 miles west of Constantinople and attacked the Greek outposts. They were being forced to withdraw when reinforcements arrived, and the Turks were thrown back across the boundary.

Constantinople, Oct. 2.—(By the Associated Press)—With an armistice conference fixed for tomorrow at Mudania, the peril of war between Great Britain and Turkey appeared less menacing today.

An immediate mutual agreement to suspend all movements of troops was expected here today to be the first outcome of the conference.

Great Britain's recession from the neutral zone controversy caused no little surprise and disappointment here, but it was generally admitted that this step was the "only thing which could have stayed Mustapha Kemal Pasha's hand. It is pointed to as another evidence of England's extraordinary patience and earnest desire to avoid war.

Saved Chanak Attack
Up to the time of the issuance of Brig. General Harrington's tempering note, Saturday night, the situation looked exceedingly critical. It is now conceded that his tact and tolerance, coupled with the timely arrival of reinforcements from England, prevented the Turks from striking at Chanak.

The situation on Saturday afternoon was so strangled that a break seemed inevitable. The British had orders to defend Chanak at all costs as the Turks were slowly encircling the Dardanelles citadel. On Saturday morning the Turkish forces were increased by 1500 cavalry; everything indicated the beginning of a hostile move.

Now difficulties await the British at the armistice conference. It is known that the Kemalists will insist upon the British withdrawal from the Asiatic shore of the Dardanelles and the immediate evacuation of Thrace by the Greeks.

The Chase Greeks
They will probably also demand the right to cross the straits to pursue the Greeks as well as guarantees against the use of Turkish waters by Greek warships and transports. The presence of Greek war craft at Rodosto furnished the Kemalists with a pretext for accusing the British of ignoring their pledges regarding the non-use of neutral waters by the Greeks.

It is expected the conference may drag for several days, as the Kemalists doubtless will bargain and haggle over every point. It is felt that the influence of the Italian generals will be important factor in bringing the meeting to a successful conclusion. The British declare they will insist upon occupying the Asiatic banks of the straits and the peril of failure of the conference. They also may contest the immediate withdrawal of the Greeks from Thrace, making this conditional on acceptance of the allied peace proposals. The inviolability of the straits will be stoutly defended.

A PRAYER FOR MOTHER'S BIRTHDAY—
Lord Jesus, Thou has known A mother's love and tender care; And Thou wilt hear, while for my own Mother most dear I make this birthday prayer.

Protect her life, pray,
Who gave the gift of life to me;
And may she know from day to day,
The deepening glow of life that comes from Thee.

As once upon her breast
Fearless and well content I lay,
So let her heart, on Thee at rest,
Feel fears depart and troubles fade away.

Her every wish fulfill;
And even if Thou must refuse
In anything, let Thy wise will
A comfort bring such as kind mother's use.

Ah, hush her by the hand,
As once her hand held mine;
And though she may not understand
Life's winding way lead her in peace divine.

I cannot pay my debt
For all the love that she has given;
But Thou, love's Lord, wilt not forget
Her due reward—bless her in earth and heaven.

—Henry Van Dyke.

FIFTY FORMER PUPILS MEET IN REUNION

About fifty of the former Sunday school pupils of Mrs. J. H. Morris, met at her home on the Hazelwood road Thursday, Sept. 28th, and enjoyed a picnic dinner. Mrs. Morris sat on the porch and greeted each one as they came.

When all were ready to partake of the bountiful dinner, Mrs. Morris' greeting was read. She assured them of the pleasure it gave her to meet all there and the interest and sympathy she had for each one. Her message to each one was, "Keep the commandments."

A most enjoyable and social time was spent during dinner and many remained for the afternoon.

Misses Emma Smith and Susie Howell are to be thanked for planning the special occasion.

PUBLIC CARD PARTY WEDNESDAY EVENING

A most cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend a card party to be given by the Dixon Woman's Relief Corps No. 218, Auxiliary to the G. A. R., on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, in G. CELEBRATED HER 14TH BIRTHDAY TODAY

Today is the 14th birthday anniversary of Miss Ethel Ellingwood and this evening she will entertain a company of eighteen friends at her home on Second street honoring the date.

The Ellingwood home is beautifully decorated with woodbine and cosmos and the rooms will be illuminated with lanterns. The tables from which ice cream and cake will be served are draped with woodbine and decorated with cosmos, making them most attractive. Games and music will be the features of the evening.

IF YOU ARE WELL BRED—

You know it is more important to choose your guests wisely for a small dinner than for a large one.

When entertaining only six or eight guests the conversation must be general and the guests, if they are not already friends, should at least have congenial tastes.

To include two persons at a small dinner who are known to be unfriendly to each other is decidedly rude to both.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE—

In arranging the wedding guests the Dutch try always to place an unmarried man or woman between a married couple at the wedding feast.

This is because of an old superstition that this will bring about the wedding of the unmarried one during the year. The omen is said to be even more favorable if the seating arrangement is adroit, rather than planned.

SPECIAL MEETINGS AT BAPTIST CHURCH OPENED YESTERDAY

Rev. E. A. Gilmore to Conduct Services for Fortnight.

(Contributed)

Rev. E. A. Gilmore began a two weeks' meeting at the Baptist church Sunday with two very strong sermons which were heard with deep interest and awakened keen anticipation of the services to follow. He will speak every evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Gilmore is well equipped for his work, being in the prime of life and having had fourteen years of experience in the ministry in addition to several years in business and in teaching in the public schools. He was born in Iowa and grew to manhood in Minnesota, where he was educated and began his ministry. He has held important pastorates in Jamestown, N. D., Aberdeen, S. D., and in the Immanuel Baptist church in St. Paul.

In each of these fields of labor he led in the erection of costly church buildings, modern in all their equipment and plans. His last pastorate was in Chicago, at the close of which he was elected by the Board of the Illinois Baptist Convention to the position of District Superintendent of Baptist work in northern Illinois.

He is not a professional evangelist, although he has had marked success in that work, both in his pastorates and in assisting others. His pleasing personality and manner of address, his fluency and force in presenting truth from the pulpit, and his experience in business and teaching qualify him to render very helpful service not only to churches but to individuals who may be troubled in questions of religious faith or duty.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend and enjoy the privileges offered by this series of special meetings. A service of song will precede the sermon each evening.

Daughter of Former Dixon Folks Called

Word has been received here by relatives, of the death of Genevieve, the eighteen-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dimmick of Rich Valley, Minn., Saturday. The parents of the little one will be remembered by many friends here, as they made their home in this vicinity until about two years ago. Funeral services were held this afternoon at Rich Valley. The little one is survived by one brother, Kenneth.

LAST SERVICE OF REVIVAL HELD AT GRACE LAST EVE.

Excellent Results of Meetings Are Seen in the Church.

(Contributed)

The last service in the evangelistic campaign at Grace United Evangelical church was held last evening, and it was the most victorious meeting in the entire series of services. There were more than twenty-five penitents at the altar of prayer, and the meeting closed at high tide. The morning service was also remarkable. Twelve or fourteen men and women came forward for prayer. The total number of seekers for pardon, renewal and sanctification was about seventy; but these figures cannot adequately represent the value of the revival. The spiritual life of the church has been deepened and enlarged and scores of people will live purer and nobler lives as a result of the meetings. Family worship has been established in a number of homes, and that means so much in these days.

life, and his ministry brings forth good fruit. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Schell sing impressively and it is evident that they have a spiritual experience which enables them to comprehend the truth of the hymns which they sing.

At the morning service Rev. Morrow preached on "The Real Glory of the Church." It is not in numbers or fine architecture but in a sanctified people. The message was a clear exposition of Eph. 5:25-27. In the afternoon he answered a number of questions, which had been placed in the question box, and thus seekers after light were given the information which they needed and desired. His sermon in the afternoon on "There remaineth, therefore, a rest for the people of God," was a most helpful and comforting message. "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light," was the text of last evening's discourse. He said people are indifferent to their spiritual needs. Satan has them hypnotized. They need to be awakened to see their spiritual and eternal danger. Secondly, they need to be awakened to immediate action, if they are to be saved from the consequences of sin. This was one of his most telling sermons.

A CLARION CALL

Red Cross Courier: One of the brilliant geniuses who syndicates astrology these days to the newspapers of the country began his sage prognostications by saying: "The seers predict unsettled conditions throughout the world."

Just to think of it!
But you don't have to go to the stars to be convinced of that. Nobody in this world is wise enough to even dream what is going to happen next.
One would have thought that the world had learned a lesson—that the madness of war had burned itself out and vanished, its flames quenched in torrents of human blood. Yet here, four years from Armistice day, the world is seething and bubbling toward a fresh explosion.

Whether we are standing on the brink no one is wise enough to know.
We think we are not. We thought pretty much the same thing a few years ago. Whatever we do, or whatever we may not do, our charter bids us be ready for "national and international relief" in times of great calamity, catastrophe and disaster.
With the world's sky banked with threatening lightnings, it behooves us not only to be ready, but to know how and why we are ready.

Every Red Cross chapter in the United States ought to be represented at the convention in Washington October 9, 10 and 11. We may be making plans there whose results shall register around the world. These are big days in which we live. Our plans and our purposes should not be smaller than our obligations.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY IN AN AGREEMENT

The soviet of Russia does not know the Occidental code of honor. Its diplomacy is that of the crafty Orient, a diplomacy selfish and totally devoid of idealism.

Foreign Minister Tchitcherine announces that Russia is in full accord with Turkey regarding the straits of the Dardanelles. The soviet theory is not that the Dardanelles is a neck of an international highway, which should be open to the world's traffic, in which, therefore, the whole world has an interest. It holds that the six Black sea states, Russia, the Ukraine, Georgia and Turkey—alone have the right to decide any question about the Dardanelles. Tchitcherine adds that these states are in agreement to this effect.

The soviet again reveals its duplicacy. It asks favors of Europe and America, yet conspires with the Mos-

BRINGING UP FATHER

lem. It professes rectitude, yet resorts to cunning for selfish ends.
The soviet government is the worst hazard among the great powers of the world. It is founded on revolutionary theories. The economic problems of the big and little nations of Europe can be settled. The only possible solution of the Russian problem seems to lie with the peasants and it is to them that the world must look for the wiping out of the plague of socialism.

UNITED FRONT IN GREAT BRIT- AIN

It took great courage for Lloyd George to tell representatives of labor that the Turkish question demanded firmness and to hold to this policy against the opposition of prominent English and colonial statesmen. Circumstances imply that his stand was right; nevertheless, it is noteworthy that his statement was accepted in good faith and opposition to his policy immediately ceased.

An outstanding English characteristic is that national forces combine in a grave emergency. This is one reason, no doubt, why British declarations are respected everywhere. The world has learned that the people speak when the government decides.
And the Turks know it.

FOCUS ON "SUCCESS"

Marshall Foch, the French military genius, being a man of deeds, is accordingly a man of few words. It is almost impossible to get him to talk about himself. But the other day he acknowledged to a Parisian press correspondent that he had a sort of philosophy of life, and to it he ascribes such success as he has enjoyed. Like most great men he minimizes the success end of it. This is how the correspondent sums up the general's explanation:

"Eliminate the hypothesis of failure." Then, a definite plan of action and the will to accomplish it—a stubborn will. And moderation in all things in personal conduct."

There are many magazines and books today dealing with "success"
and the roads which lead to it.
Doubtless they contain valuable suggestions and often act as a spur to wavering ambition. But the most exhaustive of them can not tell the aspirant to success anything fundamentally new. "Papa Foch" has not covered in some thirty words, and without these fundamentals rarely ever attained success in anything.
The man who has them gets to go a Foch in his line, whatever that may be.

THE LIMITED VOCABULARY

The inveterate statistician has figured that the vocabulary of the average woman consists of about 800 words. Without any accurate knowledge, it may be estimated that the average man is just as restricted in verbal supply, save for a smattering of technical and mechanical terms which bring his average up a little.
Yet the English language alone offers a range of thousands of words.

This being the case, why would it not be a good plan to devote some of this winter's study time to acquiring a broader, more flexible and interesting vocabulary? Learning one new word a day is a good way to begin.

An orator noted for his choice of telling and effective words confessed that this was not due to any natural gift but was "the result of long hours spent in perusal of the dictionary and books of synonyms."

A woman whose opportunities for education and contact with the world were limited astonished people of wider advantage by the range of terms which she used freely and correctly. "I read the dictionary a good deal," was her explanation.

Much time is devoted to encourag-

The next thing the Fairy Queen lost was her automobile.

It had been given to her by the Green Wizard who was an old, old friend of the family.

It wasn't an automobile like you or I have, my dear, or like the neighbors across the street have.

No, it was a very unusual automobile, and it had taken the good old wizard 11 years to make it magical enough to present to the Fairy Queen.

Yes, it was magical. So very magical that it didn't need anyone to run it at all and it could think for itself. Anyone who owned it could make it do anything he wished by just wishing.

But there was one thing to remember. This wonderful automobile would serve only one master at a time and the last person to turn the shiny handle just between the thagmacran and the thimgabob on the whirlingig was the only person whose wishes this wonderful machine would obey.

I suppose now that I have told you, everyone will be writing to the Green Wizard and ordering one of these wonderful cars. Because, without a doubt, it's much easier than having to pull handles this way and that, and push them with your feet and turn a big wheel and watch the road every second.

All you'd have to say would be:
"Mind your business," he said.

That night in Albany Darragh picked up Sard's trail. It led to a dealer in automobiles. Sard had bought a Comet Six, paying cash,
and had started north.

Through Schenectady, Fonda, and Mayfield, the following day, Dar-ragh traced a brand new Comet Six containing one short, dark Levantine with a parrot nose. In Northville Darragh hired a Ford.

At Lake Pleasant Sard's car went wrong. Darragh missed him by ten minutes, but he learned that Sard had inquired the way to Ghost Lake Inn.

That was sufficient. Darragh bought an axe, drove as far as Harrod's Corners, dismissed the Ford, and walked into a forest entirely familiar to him.

He emerged in half an hour on a

NOTRE DAME IS FIRST OF WESTERN TEAMS TO GET INTO REAL GAME

Season Will Open Officially in West Next Saturday.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Sept. 30.—Notre Dame, in its game with Kalamazoo today, is the first of the big midwestern schools to send its football warriors out on the field to battle in the campaign of 1922.

Football in the western conference will have its official opening next Saturday, when nine of the ten teams clash with rivals. Virtually all schools in the Missouri valley association also will engage in opening contests then.

In the east, the south and on the Pacific coast the game was given an earlier start. Most of the big eleven in the east were in action today. Several engagements occurred in the south and Pacific coast conference opening the season with four teams donning their war paint. California, conference champion of 1920 and 1921, met Santa Clara at Berkeley and Oregon clashed with Pacific University at Eugene.

Notre Dame Shaken
Notre Dame, shaken by the disqualifications last fall along with Illinois in the Taylorville-Carlisleville affair, sent a virtually new team against Kalamazoo.

The Notre Dame reserves returned home with the small end of a 33-14 score in a game with Lombard at Galesburg, Illinois.

Games today outside the western conference attracting big attention included: Princeton-John Hopkins; Yale-Carnegie Tech; Georgia Tech-Oglethorpe.

Iowa, 1921 champions of the big ten, meets Yale at New Haven October 14. Chicago clashes with Princeton on Stagg Field October 28, and Notre Dame's coming struggles include games with Georgia Tech, Carnegie Tech and the Army.

Consequently the performances of these outsiders are closely watched by their big ten rivals and Notre Dame.

Coch Howard Jones has cut his Hawkeye squad to twenty. Most of the smaller colleges in the middle west and throughout the country went into action today.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—(By the Associated Press) The pennant winning New York Giants and Yankees marshalled their boards of strategy today for the opening on Wednesday at the Polo Grounds of their second straight contest for the world's championship. The series this year will be for the best four out of seven, instead of five out of nine, as a year ago. Saturday's victory for the Yankees over the Red Sox, clinching the pennant, proved to be the margin by which the Huguenots held the top when the season closed yesterday. They dropped the final contest when Washington hammered Sam Jones to the tune of 5-1 and St. Louis Browns, runner up, concluded the season with their third straight triumph over Chicago, 2-1.

With the National League pennant decided in favor of the Giants, the first of last week, chief interest in the National League's concluding drive was the battle for second place, Cincinnati, under the leadership of Pat Moran, ousted Pittsburgh from the runner-up position on the final day by twice trimming the Pirates, 5-4 and 5-1. The double setback left the Pirates in a tie for third place with the St. Louis Cardinals who wound up the season by defeating Chicago 7-1.

Cleveland also upset the standing in the American League on the final day, crowding Chicago out of fourth place by defeating Detroit 6-5, while the White Sox lost to the Browns. The Tigers held third place by a single game.

Baban of the Phillies blanked the Dodgers 6-0, in the remaining contest of the season's final.

The Giant regulars, playing behind a recruit twirler, Johnson, were blanked in the first game of a double header by Tim McNamara, college rookie of the Boston Braves, while McGraw's substitute aggregation blanked the visitors in the second contest with Nehf, McQuillan and Scott on the mound. The scores of both games were 3-0. McNamara's Victory was his second shut-out in a week, Brooklyn falling a victim to his curves a few days ago.

Cleveland's ten hits were divided among eight of the nine players. Larry Gardner being the only Indian who failed to hit safely off Johnson of Detroit.

Every White Sox player except Harry Hooper made one hit off Bayne of the Browns.

The New York Giants made but two hits off McNamara of the Braves in the first game of their double header. Meusel getting one and Pinch Hitter Snyder smashing out the other.

Eppa Rixey of the Reds, pitching with a fractured hand, held the Pirates to 4 hits in the second game of their double header.

Catcher Wingo of the Reds had a perfect average in the second game, polling three hits in as many times at bat.

Cy Williams of the Phillies knocked out his 26th home run of the season in the game with Brooklyn.

MOTHER!

Move Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "CALIFORNIA" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Adv.

POSSIBLE CHANCE OF ONE OF THOSE PLAYS DRAWS LARGE CROWDS

And Chance to Recall Great Games Magnet For All Fans.

NEW YORK.—What every fan goes to the World's Series to see is one of "those plays"—one of the super-plays that he can talk about all winter and read about in somebody's memoirs in the years to come. He goes in the hope that he can tell some eager listener, "I saw it. I was there."

And in the hotels of the participating clubs in the days before the series in underway there will be that same jovial crew of "always there." Some of them spend a week crossing the continent to experience the feel of a chilly bubble creeping up their spines to be exploded near the base of the brain by somebody's one-handed stab of a hot liner or some other of the "deciding plays"—one of the many "climaxes" of the series.

Never Forget Cubs.
None of the Old Guard who take their baseball straight ever will forget the series of 1908 when Overall and "Three Finger" Brown, pitched the old Cub machine of the "genuine mahogany" days to four victories to one defeat against Detroit. Ed. Ruess and Ed. Pfeister were other hurlers of the old Cubs.

In the hotel lobbies now they are heatedly discussing the pitching duel between Christy Mathewson and Rube Marland of the Giants against Chief Bender and Eddie Plank of the Athletics of only 10 years ago, and how Franklin J. Baker, the young Marylander, was permitted to sign "Home Run" before his name when the dust had cleared away.

Others talk of the "Hitless Wonders" of 1906—the team of the late Jiggs Donahue and the amusing Nick Altrock that swamped Frank Chance and his brilliant Cubs, four games to two, and how Donahue made several one-handed catches of badly-thrown balls by stretching an unbelievable

Quick oats now— 3 to 5 minutes

If you want oats that are almost ready, ask for Instant Quaker Oats.

This style cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. It is the quickest cooking oats in the world.

Just like regular Quaker Oats in that matchless quality. Flaked from queen grains only—just the rich, plump, flavory oats. They have the flavor which has won the world to Quaker.

But in Instant Quaker the oats are cut before flaking. They are rolled very thin and partly cooked. So the flakes are smaller and thinner—that is all. And the small thin flakes cook quickly.

Your grocer has both styles. The Instant style is marked "Instant" on the label.

They talk, too, of "Babe" Adams, the old war horse of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who won three games for the "Smoky City" team from the Tigers of other days—the 1909 American League champions.

Boston Also Talks.
The Boston tribe speaks touchingly—almost tearfully—of the 1912 series which the Red Sox took from the Giants, winning four, losing three and tying one. "It was in the eighth and final game at Boston on October 16 when the score was a tie at the end of the ninth," so the legend runs. "The Giants scored one in the 10th," says the Old Fan. "Scored one and led. Harry Hooper did the job. Why, sir! he leaned over the fence and took Doyle's long hit that was ticketed for a home run and, as turned out later, it was the saving of the series. It was the deciding play. That was the climax."

"At any rate the world went to pieces for the Giants in their half of the inning. Snodgrass muffed a long fly hit by Engle who batted for Wood. Engle went to second on the error. Snodgrass tried to redeem himself on the next play by safely catching a terrific liner that Harry Hooper hit with the intention of ending the series."

Christy Mathewson, twirling for New York, put all the fooling he had into his pitching to Yorkers but the batter walked. Then Fred Merkle, the Giant first baseman, muffed a foul from the bat of Iris Speaker and then—

Then Came Climax.
"That," breaks in the listener, "was the climax. That, not Hooper's catch, was the deciding play. Now I was there—and"

"And then," goes on the first speaker, frowning, "Old Tris singled and Engle came home with the tying run. Yorkers scored the winning run one minute and eight seconds later—by my watch—when Gardner sent a long sacrifice fly to Devore."

None of the fans forget the triple play made unassisted by Wagners of Cleveland in the fifth inning of the fifth game against Brooklyn in 1920; Elmer Smith's homer with three on in the first inning of the same game and Bagby's homer with two on in the fourth inning, also of the same game.

None of the howling mob who shook the concrete Polo Grounds, will forget the fifth inning of the first game last year when Mike McNally, who had hit a two-bagger and had gone to third on Schang's sacrifice, stole home with Mays getting ready to hit the ball.

Uncertain Future is Cause of Many Vacant Pulpits Preacher Says

Mason City, Iowa, Oct. 2.—Lack of assurance that they will be able to live in reasonable comfort after their days of service are over was held by the Rev. J. H. Cudlipp of Burlington to be the principal reason for the 30,000 vacant pulpits in America today, in his address before the Upper Iowa M. E. Conference Sunday night.

"With a salary approximately the same as that of a street sweeper and a higher standard of living thrust upon him, the preacher finds it impossible to save for old age," he asserted. "We don't want to make the ministry a sugar stick job, but we do maintain that preacher should be assured of a certain degree of comfort, such as every other profession affords, through a greater remuneration during the years of service."

Opera Stars Praise Tanlac Both Now Enjoy Fine Health

Mme. Rosina Agostini, soprano, and Sig. Guiseppe Agostini, tenor, noted opera stars, who declare their stomach troubles have been completely overcome since taking Tanlac.

"If ever a person felt like they had been made over I am that person, thanks to Tanlac" declared Mme. Rosina Agostini, noted leading soprano of the San Carlos Opera Co., residing at Hotel Grenoble, New York City.

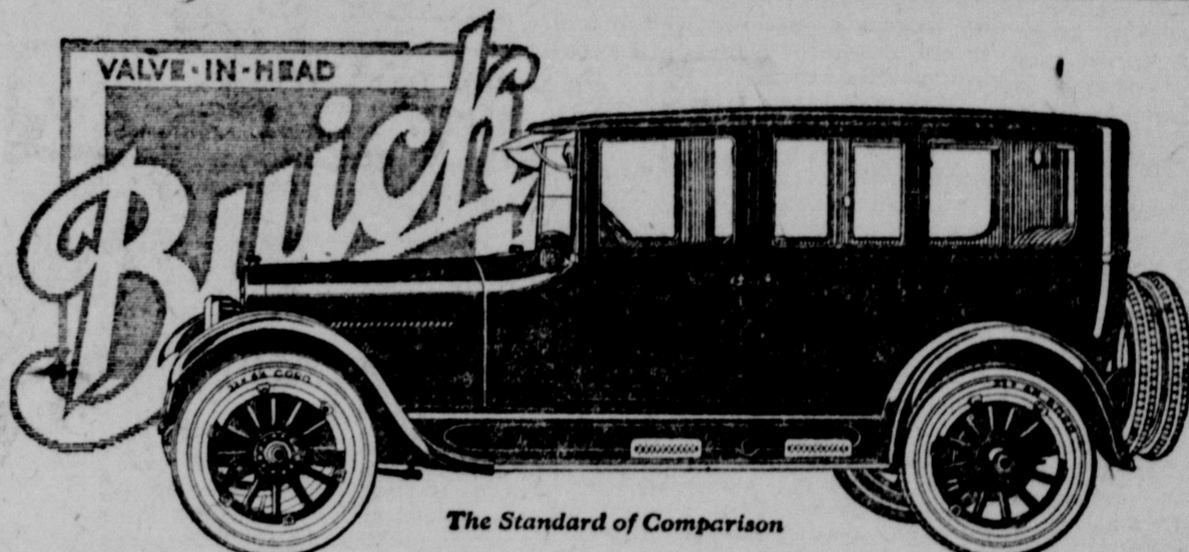

"I suffered from a nervous run-down condition and got so I dreaded to face my audiences. But as soon as I started taking Tanlac I began to improve, and now I am perfectly normal."

The experience of Mme. Agostini's husband, Sig. Guiseppe Agostini, famous leading tenor of the same troupe, also shows the value of Tanlac as a tonic and stomach corrective. He said:

"My stomach went back on me and I soon got into pretty bad condition. I followed my wife's example and took Tanlac. It helped to fix me up in a short time, and now I always feel fit."

NOTE—The International Proprietaries Co., distributors of Tanlac, have on file in their offices at Atlanta, Georgia, over fifty thousand signed statements from representative men and women from every State in the Union and every Province in Canada. Many of these are from prominent people in this city and section and have been previously published in this paper.

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.—Adv.

The Cash Value of Tractor Power

"TIME is the essence in good farming", writes Frank I. Mann, one of the most successful farmers in the United States. "To judge the value of a tractor on the farm it must be considered in relation to its ability to do farm work at the time to give most profitable return from the crops grown."

Mr. Mann goes on to show that farm work is subject to continual delays from adverse weather conditions, and the one great advantage of the tractor is in enabling the farmer to handle peak loads on time.

In one case cited, tractor power enabled the farmer to sow a good acreage of spring wheat on March 23, which early seeding gave him a return of 44 bushels per acre, thus illustrating the cash value of tractor power.

A tractor to do its work must have petroleum products.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) takes great pride in the fact that its organization is able to supply the needs of these tractors in 10 Middle Western states with petroleum products of superior quality.

No matter how unexpectedly the farmer's peak load may arrive, he will find that this Company has ever ready at his call such gasoline, kerosene and lubricants as he may need.

Owing to the isolation of many farmers and farming districts, this task of supplying petroleum products at dependable intervals is a big and often an exceedingly difficult one.

Nevertheless, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), inspired by its obligation to the community, has always met rural needs for petroleum in a big way. The Company constantly is extending its operations to provide facilities which under all conditions enable it to meet the demands made upon it, and to guarantee a reliable and sustained service even in periods of stress.

GILBERT PARKER

COPYRIGHT BY SIR GILBERT PARKER

He had need of all his skill, for Mallow was set to win the fight. He felt instinctively what was working in Dyck's mind. He had fought a number of duels, and with a certain trick of art he had given the end to the lives of several. He became conscious, however, that Dyck had a particular stroke in mind, which he himself was preventing by masterful methods. It might be one thing or another, but in view of Dyck's training it would perhaps be the Ennisworthy touch.

Again and again Dyck pressed his antagonist backward, seeking to muddle his defense and to clear an opening for his own deadly stroke; but the other man also was a master, and parried successfully.

Presently, with a quick move, Mallow took the offensive, and tried to unsettle Dyck's poise and disorganize his battle-plan. For an instant the tempestuous action, the brilliant, swift play of the sword, the quivering flippancy of the steel, gave Dyck that which almost disconcerted him. Yet he had a grip of himself, and was fortunate to preserve his defense intact; though once his enemy's steel caught his left shoulder, making it bleed. The seconds, however, decided that the thrust was not serious, and made no attempt to interrupt the combat.

Dyck's tactics changed. Once again he became aggressive, and he drove his foe to a point where the skill of both men was tried to the uttermost. It was clear the time had come for something definite. Suddenly Dyck threw himself back with an agile step, lunged slightly to one side, and then in a gallant foray got the steel point into the sword-arm of his enemy. That was the Ennisworthy stroke, which had been taught him by William Tandy, the expert swordsman, and had been made famous by Lord Wellington of Ennisworthy. It succeeded, and it gave Dyck the victory, for Mallow's sword dropped from his hand. He clasped the wounded arm with his left hand as the surgeon came forward.

The Time Had Come for Something Definite.

"Well, you got it home," he said to Dyck; "and it's deftly done."

"I did my best," answered Dyck. "Give me your hand, if you will."

With a wry look Mallow, now seated on the old stump of a tree, held out his left hand. It was covered with blood.

"I think we'll have to forego that courtesy, Calhoun," he said. "Look at the state of my hand! It's good blood," he added grimly. "It's d-d good blood, but—but it won't do you see."

"I'm glad it was no worse," said Dyck, not touching the bloody hand. "It's a clean thrust, and you'll be better from it soon. These great men!" he smiled toward the surgeons—"will soon put you right. I got my chance with the stroke, and took it, because I knew if I didn't you'd have me presently."

"You'll have a great reputation in Dublin town now, and you'll deserve it," Mallow added admiringly, the great paleness of his features, however, made ghastly by the hatred in his eyes.

Dyck did not see this look, but he felt a note of malice—a distant note—in Mallow's voice. He saw that what Mallow had said was fresh evidence of the man's arrogant character. It did not offend him, however, for he was victor, and could enter the Breakneck club or Dublin society with a tranquil eye.

Again Mallow's voice was heard. "I'd have seen you d-d to h—ll, Calhoun, before I'd have apologized at the Breakneck club; but after a fight with one of the best swordsmen in Ireland I've learned a lot, and I'll apologize now—completely."

The surgeon had bound up the slight wound in Dyck's shoulder, had stopped the bleeding, and was now helping him on with his coat. The operation had not been without pain, but this demonstration from his foe was too much for him. It drove the look of pain from his face; it brought a smile to his lips. He came a step nearer.

"I'm as obliged to you as if you'd paid for my board and lodging, Mallow," he said; "and that's saying a good deal in these days. I'll never have a bigger fight. You're a greater swordsman than your reputation. I must have provoked you beyond reason," he went on gallantly. "I think we'd better forget the whole thing."

"I'm a loyalist," Mallow replied. "I'm a loyalist, and if you're one, too, what reason should there be for our not being friends?"

A black cloud flooded Calhoun's face.

"If I'm a loyalist, you say! Have you any doubt of it? If you have—"

"You wish your sword had gone into my heart instead of my arm, eh?" interrupted Mallow. "How easily I am misunderstood! I meant nothing by that 'if.' He smiled, and the smile had a touch of wickedness. "I meant nothing by it—nothing at all. As we are both loyalists, we must be friends. Good-by, Calhoun!"

Dyck's face cleared very slowly. Mallow was maddening, but the look of the face was not that of a foe.

"Well, let us be friends," Dyck answered with a cordial smile. "Good-by," he added. "I'm d-d sorry we had to fight at all. Good-by!"

CHAPTER IV.

The Killing of Erris Boyne.

"There's many a government has made a mess of things in Ireland," said Erris Boyne; "but since the day of Cromwell the Accursed this is the worst. Is there a man in Ireland that believes in it, or trusts it? There are men that support it, that are served by it, that fill their pockets out of it; but by Joseph and by Mary, there's none thinks there couldn't be a better! Have a little more marsala, Calhoun!"

With these words, Boyne filled up the long glass out of which Dyck Calhoun had been drinking—drinking too much. Shortly before, Dyck had lost all his cash at the card-table. He had turned from it penniless and discomfited to see Boyne, smiling, and gay with wine, in front of him.

Boyne took him by the arm. "Come with me," said he. "There's no luck for you at the tables today. Let's go where we can forget the world, where we can lift the banner of freedom and beat the drums of purpose. Come along, lad!"

The time was critical for Dyck—critical and dangerous. He had lost money heavily; he had even exhausted his mother's legacy. Of late he had seen little of his father, and the little he had seen was not fortunate. They had quarreled over Dyck's wayward doings. He had angered his father terribly, and Miles, in a burst of temper, had disclosed the fact that his own property was in peril. They had been estranged ever since; but the time had come when Dyck must at least secure the credit of his father's name at his bank to find the means of living.

It was with this staring him in the face that Erris Boyne's company seemed to offer at least a recovery of his good spirits. Dublin knew little of Boyne's present domestic life. It did not know that he had injured his second wife as badly as he had wronged his first—with this difference, however, that his first wife was a lady, while his second wife, Noreen, was a beautiful, quick-tempered, lovable, eighteen-year-old girl, a graduate of the kitchen and dairy, when he took her to himself. He had married her in a mad moment after his first wife—Mrs. Llyn, as she was now called—had divorced him; and after the first thrill of married life was over, nothing remained with Boyne except regret that he had sold his freedom for what he might, perhaps, have had without marriage.

Then began a process of domestic torture which alienated Noreen from him, and roused in her the worst passions of human nature. She came to know of his infidelities, and they maddened her. They had no children, and in the end he had threatened her with desertion. When she had retorted in strong words, he slapped her face, and left her with an ugly smile.

Of visitors they had few, if any, and the young wife was left alone to brood upon her wrongs. Erris Boyne had slammed her face on the morning of the day when he met Dyck Calhoun in the hour of his bad luck. He did not see the look in her face as he left the house.

Ruthless as he was, he realized the time had come when by bold effort he might get young Calhoun wholly into his power. He began by getting Dyck into the street. Then he took him by an indirect route to what was, reputedly, a tavern of consequence. Outwardly it was a tavern of the old class, superficially sedate, and called the Harp and Crown. None save a very few conspirators knew how great a part it played in the plan to break the government of Ireland and to ruin England's position in the land.

The entrance was by two doors—one the ordinary public entrance, the other at the side of the house, which was on a corner. This could be opened by a skeleton key owned by Erris Boyne.

He and Dyck entered, however, by the general entrance, because Boyne had forgotten his key. They passed through the bar-parlor, nodding to one or two habitués, and presently were bestowed in a room, not large, but well furnished.

They played cards, and Dyck won. He won five times what he had lost at the club. This made him companionable.

"It's a poor business—cards," he said at last. "It puts one up in the clouds and down in the ditch all at the same time. I tell you this, Boyne—I'm going to stop. No man ought to play cards who hasn't a fortune; and my fortune, I'm sorry to say, is only my face!" He laughed bitterly.

"And your sword—you've forgotten that, Calhoun. You've a lot of luck in your sword."

"Well, I've made no money out of it so far," Dyck retorted cynically.

"Yet you've put men with reputations out of the running, men like Mallow. Try a little more of this marsala, Calhoun. It's the best in the place, and it's got a lot of good stuff. I've been coming to the Harp and Crown for many years, and I've never had a bad drink all that time. The old landlord is a genius. He doesn't put on airs. He's a good man, is old Swinton, and there's nothing good in the drink of France that you can't get here."

"Well, if that's true, how does it happen?" asked Dyck, with a little flash of interest. "It means a lot of trouble, eh?"

"It means some trouble. But let me tell you," he leaned over the table and laid a hand on Dyck's, which was a little nervous—"let me speak as an old friend to you, if I may. Here are the facts. For many a year, you know as well as I do, ships have been coming from France to Ireland with the very best wines and liquors, and taking back the very best wool—mangled, of course. Well, our little landlord here is the d-dest rogue of all. The customs never touch him. From the coast the stuff comes up to Dublin without a check, and, as he's a special favorite, he gets the best to be had in la belle France."

"Why is he such a favorite?" asked Dyck.

Erris Boyne laughed, not loudly, but suggestively.

"When a lady kisses a man on the lips, of her own free will, and puts her arm around his neck, is it done, do you think, because it's her duty to do it, or die? No, it's because she likes the man; because the man is a good friend to her; because it's money in her pocket. That's the case with old Swinton. France kisses him, as it were, because," he paused, as though debating what to say—"because France knows he'd rather be under her own revolutionary government than under the monarchy of England."

His voice had resonance, and, as he said these words, it had insistence.

"Do you know, Calhoun, I think old Swinton is right. We suffer here because monarchy, with its cruel hand of iron, mistreats us, brutalizes us."

He did not see enlightenment come into the half-drunk eyes of Dyck. He only realized that Dyck was very still, and strangely, deeply interested.

"I tell you, Calhoun, we need in Ireland something of the spirit that's alive in France today. They've cleaned out the kings—Louis! and Marie's heads have dropped into the basket. They're sweeping the dirt out of France; they're cleaning the dark places; they're whitewashing Versailles and sawdusting the Tuilleries; they're starting for the world a reformation which will make it clean. Not America alone, but England, and all Europe, will become republics."

"England?" asked Dyck in a low, penetrating voice.

"Aye, England, through Ireland. Ireland will come first, then Wales, Scotland and England. Dear lad, the great day is come—the greatest the world has ever known. France, the spirit of it, is alive. It will purge and cleanse the universe!"

The suspicious, alert look passed from Dyck's eyes, but his face had become flushed. He reached out and poured himself another glass of wine. "What you say may be true, Boyne. It may be true, but I wouldn't put faith in it—not for one icy minute. I don't want to see here in Ireland the horrors and savagery of France. I don't want to see the guillotine up on St. Stephen's green."

Boyne felt that he must march carefully. He was sure of his game; but there were difficulties, and he must not throw his chances away.

"Well, I'll tell you, Calhoun. I don't know which is worse—Ireland bloody with shootings and hangings. Cluster up in the north and Cork in the south, from the Giant's causeway to Tralee; no two sets of feet dancing alike, with the bloody hand of England stretching out over the Irish parliament like death itself; or France ruling us. How does the English government live here? Only by bribery and purchases. It buys its way. Isn't that true?"

Dyck nodded.

"Yes, it's true in a way," he replied. "It's so, because we're what we are. We've never been properly put in our places. The heel on our necks—that's the way to do it."

Boyne looked at the flushed, angry face. In spite of Dyck's words, he felt that his medicine was working well.

"Listen to me, Calhoun," he said softly. "You've got to do something. You're living an idle life. You're in debt. There are but two courses open to you. One is to join the British forces—to be a lieutenant, a captain, a major, a colonel, or a general, in time; to shoot and cut and hang and quarter, and rule with a heavy rod. That's one way."

"So you think I'm fit for nothing but the sword, eh?" asked Dyck with irony. "You think I've got no brains for anything except the army?"

Boyne laughed.

"Have another drink, Calhoun." He poured out more wine. "Oh, no, not the army alone; there's the navy—and there's the French navy! It's the best navy in the world, the freest and the greatest, and with Bonaparte going at us, England will have enough to do—too much, I'm thinking. So there's a career in the French navy open. And listen—before you and I are two months older, the French navy will be in the harbors of Ireland, and the French army will land here."

He reached out and grasped Dyck's arm. "There's no liberty of freedom under the Union Jack. What do you think of the tricolor? It's a great flag, and under it the world is going to be ruled—England, Spain, Italy, Holland, Prussia, Austria and Russia—all of them. The time is ripe. You've got your chance. Take it on, dear lad, take it on!"

Dyck did not raise his head. He was leaning forward with both arms on the table, supporting himself firmly; his head was bowed as though with deep interest in what Boyne said. And, indeed, his interest was great—so great that all his manhood, vigor, all his citizenship, were vitally alive. Yet he did not lift his head.

"What's that you say about French ships in the harbors of Ireland?" he said in a tone that showed interest. "Of course, I know there's been a lot of talk of a French raid on Ireland, but I didn't know it was to be so soon."

"Oh, it's near enough! It's all been arranged," replied Boyne. "There'll be ships—warships, commanded by Hoche. They'll have orders to land on the coast, to join the Irish patriots, to take control of the operations, and then to march on—"

He was going to say "march on Dublin," but he stopped. He was playing a daring game. If he had not been sure of his man, he would not have been so frank and fearless.

He did not, however, mislead Dyck greatly. Dyck had been drinking a good deal, but this knowledge of a French invasion, and a sense of what Boyne was trying to do, steadied his shaken emotions; held him firmly in the grip of practical common sense. He laughed, hiccupped a little, as though he was very drunk, and said:

"Of course the French would like to come to Ireland; they'd like to seize it and hold it. Why, of course they would! Of course; but what astounds me is that a man of your standing should believe the French are coming here now to Ireland. No, no, Boyne; I'm not taking your word for any of these things. You're a gossip; you're a d-d, pertinacious, posterous gossip, and I'll say it as often as you like."

"So it's proof you want, is it? Well, then, here it is."

Boyne drew from his pocket a small leather-bound case and took from it a letter, which he laid on the table in front of Dyck.

Dyck looked at the document, then said:

"Ah, that's what you are, eh?—a captain in the French artillery! Well, that'd be a surprise in Ireland if it were told."

"It isn't going to be told unless you tell it, Calhoun, and you're too much of a sportsman for that. Besides, why shouldn't you have one of these if you want it—if you want it? Listen to me, Calhoun," reaching out a hand to lay it on Dyck's arm.

Dyck saw the motion, however, and carefully drew back in his chair. "I'm not an adventurer," he said; "but if I were, what would there be in it for me?"

Boyne misunderstood the look on Dyck's face. He did not grasp the meaning behind the words, and he said to him:

"Oh, a good salary—as good as that of a general, with a commission and the spoils of war! That's the thing in the French army that counts for so much—spoils of war. When they're out on a country like this, they let their officers loose—their officers and men. Did you ever hear tell of a French army being pinched for food, or going thirsty for drink, or losing its head for poverty or indigence?"

"No, I never did."

"Well, then, take the advice of an officer of the French army resident in Dublin," continued Boyne, laughing, "who has the honor of being received as the friend of Mr. Dyck Calhoun of Playmore! Take your hand in the game that's going on! For a man as young as you, with brains and ambition, there's no height he mightn't reach in this country. Think of it—Ireland free from English control; Ireland, with all her dreams, living her own life, fearless, independent, as it was in days of yore. Why, what's to prevent you, Dyck Calhoun, from being president of the Irish republic? You have brains, looks, skill and a wonderful tongue. None but a young man could take on the job, for it will require boldness, skill and the recklessness of perfect courage. Isn't it good enough for you?"

"What's the way to do it?" asked Dyck, still holding on to his old self grimly. "How is it to be done?" He spoke a little thickly, for, in spite of himself, the wine was clogging his senses. It had been artistically drugged by Boyne.

"Listen to me, Calhoun," continued Boyne. "I've known you now some time. We've come in and gone out together. This day was inevitable. You were bound to come to it one way or another. Man, you have a heart of iron; you have the courage of Caesar or Alexander; you have the chance of doing what no Englishman could ever do—Cromwell, or any other. Well, then, don't you see the fateful moment has come in Irish life and history? Strife everywhere! Alone, what can we do? Alone, if we try to shake off the yoke that binds us we shall be shattered, and our last end will be worse than our first. But with French ships, French officers and soldiers, French guns and ammunition, with the trained men of the French army to take control here, what amelioration of our weakness, what confidence and skill on our side! Can you doubt what the end will be? Answer me, man; don't you see it all? Isn't it clear to you? Doesn't such a cause enlist you?"

With a sudden burst of primitive anger, Dyck got to his feet, staggering a little, but grasping the fatal meaning of the whole thing. He looked at Erris Boyne in the eyes. His own were bloodshot and dissipated, but there was a look in them of which Boyne might well take heed.

"I tell you this, Erris Boyne; there's none has ever tried me as you have done! What do you think I am—a thing of the dirty street corner, something to be swept up and cast into the furnace of treason? Look you! After today you and I will never break bread or drink wine together. No—by Heaven, no! I don't know whether you've told me the truth or not, but I think you have. There's this to say—I shall go from this place to Dublin castle, and shall tell them there—without mentioning your name—what you've told about the French raid. Now, look you, by God, you're a traitor. You oughtn't to live, and if you'll send your seconds to me I'll try and do with you as I did with Leonard Mallow. Only mark me, Erris Boyne. I'll put my sword into your heart. You understand—into your filthy heart!"

At that moment the door of the room opened, and a face looked in for an instant—the face of old Swinton, the landlord of the Harp and Crown. Suddenly Boyne's look changed. He burst into a laugh, and brought his fists down on the table between them with a bang.

"By Joseph and by Mary, but you're a patriot, Calhoun! I was trying to test you. I was searching to find the innermost soul of you. The French fleet, my commission in the French army, and my story about the landlord are all bosh. If I meant what I told you, do you think I'd have been so mad as to tell you so much, d-dn it? Have you no sense, man? I wanted to find out exactly how you stood—faithful or unfaithful to the crown—and I've found out. Sit down, sit down, Calhoun, dear lad. Take your hand off your sword. Remember, these are terrible days. Everything I said about France is false. Sit down, man, and if you're going to join the king's army—as I hope and trust you will—then here's something to help you face the time between." He threw on the table a packet of notes.

"They're good and healthy, and will buy you what you need. There's not much. There's only a hundred pounds, but I give it to you with all my heart, and you can pay it back when the king's money comes to you, or when you marry a rich woman."

He said it all with a smile on his face. It was done so cleverly, with so much simulated sincerity, that Dyck, in his state of semi-drunkenness, could not, at the instant, place him in his true light.

Never in his life had Boyne performed such prodigies of dissimulation. He realized to the full the dangers he had run in disclosing the truth; for it was the truth that he had told.

So serious was the situation, to his mind, that one thing seemed inevitable. Dyck must be kidnapped at once and carried out of Ireland. It would be simple. A little more drugged wine, and he would be asleep and powerless—it had already tugged at him. With the help of his confederates in the tavern, Dyck could be carried out, put on a lugger and sent away to France.

There was nothing else to do. Boyne had said truly that the French fleet meant to come soon. Dyck must be able to give the thing away before it happened. Already the wine had played havoc with him; already stupefaction was coming over his senses. With a good-natured, ribald laugh, Boyne poured out another glass of marsala and pushed it gently over to Dyck's fingers.

"My gin to your marsala," he said, and he raised his own glass of gin, looking playfully over the top to Dyck.

With a sudden loosening of all the fibres of his nature, Dyck raised the glass of marsala to his lips and drained it off almost at a gulp.

"You're a prodigious liar, Boyne," he said. "I didn't think any one could lie so completely."

"I'll teach you how, Calhoun. It's not hard. I'll teach you how."

He passed a long cigar over the table to Dyck, who, however, did not light it, but held it in his fingers. Boyne struck a light and held it out across the small table. Dyck leaned forward, but, as he did so, the wine took possession of his senses. His head fell forward in sleep, and the cigar dropped from his fingers.

"Ah, well—ah, well, we must do some business now," remarked Boyne. He leaned over Dyck for a moment. "Yes, sound asleep," he said, and laughed scornfully to himself. "Well, when it's dark we must get him away. He'll sleep for four or five hours and by that time he'll be out on the way to France, and the rest is easy."

He was about to go out to the door that led into the business part of the house, when the door leading into the street opened softly, and a woman stepped inside. She had used the key which Boyne had forgotten at his house.

At first he did not hear her. Then, when he did turn round, it was too late. The knife she carried under her skirt flashed out and into Boyne's heart. He collapsed on the floor without a sound, save only a deep sigh.

Steeping over, Noreen drew the knife out with a little gurgling cry—a smothered exclamation. Then she opened the door again—the side-door leading into the street—closed it softly, and was gone.

Three hours afterward the landlord opened the door. Erris Boyne lay in his silence, stark and still. At the table, with his head sunk in his arms, sat Dyck Calhoun, snoring stentorously, his drawn sword by his side.

With a cry the old man knelt on the floor beside the body of Erris Boyne.

CHAPTER V.

Dyck in Prison.

When Dyck Calhoun waked, he was in the hands of the king's constables, arrested for the murder of Erris Boyne. Also, the landlord was ready to swear concerning a quarrel he had seen when he opened the door for a moment. Dyck, with sudden caution, only said that he would make all clear at the trial.

Driven through the streets of Dublin in a jaunting car between two of the king's police, he was a mark for abuse by tongue, but was here and there cheered by partisans of the ultra-loyal group to which his father adhered. The effect of the drug was still upon him and his mind was confused. He remembered the quarrel, Boyne's explanation and the subsequent drinking, but he could recall nothing further. He could not believe he had killed Boyne; yet Boyne had been found with a wound in his heart, and his own naked sword lying beside him on the table. The trouble was that he could not absolutely swear he had not committed the crime.

The situation was not eased by his stay in jail. On the contrary, it began with a revelation terribly repugnant to him. He had not long been lodged in the cell when he received a visit from Michael Clones, who stretched out his hand in an agony of humiliation.

"Ah, you didn't do it—you didn't do it, sir!" he cried. "I'm sure you never killed him. It wasn't your way. He was for doing you harm if he could. An evil man he was, as all the world knows. But there's one thing that'll be worse than anything else to you. You never knew it, and I never knew it till an hour ago. Did you know who Erris Boyne was? Well, I'll tell you. He was the father of Sheila Llyn. He was divorced by Mrs. Llyn many years ago, for having to do with other women. She took to her maiden name, and he married again."

"Good God! Good God!" Dyck Calhoun made a gesture of horror. "He's Sheila Llyn's father! Good God!"

Suddenly a passion of remorse roused him out of his semi-stupefaction.

"Michael, Michael!" he said, his voice hoarse, broken. "Don't say such a thing! Are you sure?" Michael nodded.

"I'm sure. I got it from one that's known Erris Boyne and his first wife and girl—one that was a servant to them both in past days. He's been down to Limerick to see Mrs. Llyn and the beautiful daughter. I met him an hour ago and he told me. He told me more. He told me Mrs. Llyn spoke to him of your friendship with Erris Boyne, and how she meant to tell you who and what he was. She said her daughter didn't even know her father's name. She had been kept in ignorance."

Dyck seated himself on the rough bed of the cell and stared at Michael, his hands between his knees, his eyes perturbed.

"Michael," he said at last, "if it's true—that you've told me—I don't see my way. Every step in front of me is black with villainess. To tell the whole truth is to bring fresh shame upon Mrs. Llyn and her daughter, and not to tell the whole truth is to take away the only chance I have of getting out of this trouble. I see that!"

"I don't know what you mean, sir, but I'll tell you this. None that knows you would believe you'd murder Erris Boyne or any other man."

Dyck wiped the sweat from his forehead.

"I suppose you speak the truth, Michael, but it isn't people who've known me that'll try me; and I can't tell all."

"Why not, if it'll help you?"

"I can't—of course I can't. It would be disgrace eternal."

"Why? Tell me why, sir?"

Dyck looked closely, firmly at the old servant and friend. Should he tell the truth—that Boyne had tried to induce him to sell himself to the French, to invoke his aid against the English government, to share in treason? If he could have told it to anybody, he would have done so to Michael; but if it was true that in his blindness he had killed Boyne, he would not seek to escape by proving Boyne a traitor.

Dyck had a foolish strain in him, after all. Romance was his deadly foe; it made him do a stupid, if chivalrous, thing. Meanwhile, he would warn the government at once about the projected French naval raid.

"Michael," said Dyck, rising, "see my father, but you're not to say I didn't kill Boyne, for, to tell the truth, I don't know. My head—he put his hand

LAY OFF THE GRAPES! (By Dad Carter, the Onarga Bard) When the grapes are hanging lush and the days are growing colder and Jack Frost is in his prime, and the fruit jars filled to fullness stand in rows upon the shelf, and the jelly, jam, and fruit juice, each one set off by itself, then there comes a great temptation stirring deep the thoughts of man, how the surplus grapes may filter through the prohibition ban; big stone jars are now in order, gallons five and up to ten, and you see them in the autos as their homeward way they wend; happy thought has come to many, how to save those fruits of vine, mash them up with good cane sugar, set aside and bide your time; but, alas, be thou quite wary, Uncle Sam is right in line, and he's very apt to get you if your grape juice turns to wine. 23013

LAY OFF THE GRAPES! (By Dad Carter, the Onarga Bard) When the grapes are hanging lush and the days are growing colder and Jack Frost is in his prime, and the fruit jars filled to fullness stand in rows upon the shelf, and the jelly, jam, and fruit juice, each one set off by itself, then there comes a great temptation stirring deep the thoughts of man, how the surplus grapes may filter through the prohibition ban; big stone jars are now in order, gallons five and up to ten, and you see them in the autos as their homeward way they wend; happy thought has come to many, how to save those fruits of vine, mash them up with good cane sugar, set aside and bide your time; but, alas, be thou quite wary, Uncle Sam is right in line, and he's very apt to get you if your grape juice turns to wine. 23013

HOUSEWIVES Are now thinking of fall house cleaning. That brings to mind the pantry shelves and fresh covering for which we have white paper put up in rolls at 10c, 15c, 20c and 50c. B. F. Shaw Ptg. Co. 23013

KNITTED SUITS.
Knitted suits, both in wool and silk, are seen as the fall season advances. Tan and Gray seem to be the most popular colors, and frequently shoes, hat and gloves carry out the same tone.
The newest idea for hats is a heat-proof lining.

TRIMMINGS.
Ostrich is much used for trimming, particularly worn about the waist with fashions. Often it is combined with flowers of metal ribbons and frequently unique color combinations are evolved.
Men's starched white collars were unknown before 1825.

Peaches

Just a few left in car of those fine Elberta Peaches. Will close out Monday at $2.00 per bushel basket at store. You will have to hurry as they won't last long. This is the finest stock that has been in Dixon this year, or will be. You run very little chance in buying here as we are here to see that you get a square deal. Our stock is worth 25c to 50c per basket more than ordinary stock sold by peddlers.
